

LEGACY FLIGHT TRAINING MOVES TO NEW LOCATION AT PIPER AIRCRAFT HEADQUARTERS

Simulator and Classroom Capacity Grows with New KVRB Facility

January 4, 2016 - Vero Beach, Fla. Legacy Flight Training has moved their Vero Beach base of operations to a new training facility on-site at the Piper Aircraft Headquarters. The new training facility easily houses the existing Meridian and Mirage/Matrix simulators and offers ample space for additional simulators in the future. The new location also provides room for additional and larger classrooms, allowing for expansion of training services.

“Legacy Flight Training enjoyed our first five years of operations in the Vero Beach Terminal Building, but had definitely outgrown the space,” said Bill Inglis, President & Owner at Legacy Flight Training. “Our new facility on-site at Piper has been designed with an eye towards growth. With this additional space, we’ll be in a position to quickly add additional simulators and training tools, as well as additional classrooms.”

The new facility, which has been completely renovated, has been designed to accommodate all Legacy Flight Training operations today and in the future. Classroom space allows for multiple, personal classes to operate comfortably in tandem while additional clients are trained concurrently in the simulators. The new KVRB facility will also provide more space for client break time, instructor offices, and administrative offices. Additionally, the new facility provides large classrooms to accommodate a broad array of training tools to facilitate additional Piper-focused training, such as factory-authorized maintenance training.

Bill Inglis went on to say, “We are proud of our partnership with Piper Aircraft. The Piper team has been extraordinary in facilitating this move. Every Piper employee is clearly dedicated to providing an excellent customer experience during every phase of a customer's ownership time. It is clear that Piper cares about the safety of their customers and they illustrate that commitment by continuing to invest in insuring that their customers are as safe as possible and have access to professional, high quality training.”

Legacy Flight Training is an Authorized Piper Training Center, is FAA Team approved and Insurance Company Approved. Training is provided by experienced staff with PA-46 specific experience and knowledge at facilities in Vero Beach, Florida, and in Scottsdale, Arizona.
